If you need extra help please makes hesitate to contact us all this in 1923, when Mario and Irma Colombo had a vision, a dream of independence. Together, they left their permanent posts to found the Manifattura Mario Colombo. A small company specializing in the production of leggings and hats for men. Clothes that enjoyed great popularity in the twenties. The somewhat heavy name of the company, however, quickly prompted Mario to find a new, more concise. With some friends, he wrote ideas on a pack of cigarettes before the brand's current name emerged. The first three letters of the surname and the first three letters of the first name: Colmar was born. Colmar grew rapidly and made a name for itself outside Italy with its high quality products. By 1936, the company had more than 100 employees and sold its products to Persia, Egypt and other countries. After the fascist regime of Benito Mussolini invaded Ethiopia and was banned from export by the League of Nations, the flourishing company faced its first serious crisis. Until his cousin Edoardo Sala, who ran a cotton mill, made a decisive proposal. In addition to the leggings and hats produced so far, the company also wanted to focus on workwear. Its specially developed cotton called Massaua 10 was distinguished by its treatment by chemical agents, which not only prevented shrinkage and loss of quality during washing, but also proved extremely suitable for snow. Colmar has equipped Léo Gasperi, the first holder of the speed ski record, with a special ski coat with a wingsuit-like shape. Colmar and winter sports: a love that must no longer be extinguished. IN CAS OF NEIGE: COLMAR With Colmar Sport, the Italian brand monza offers sportswear for skiing and outdoor adventures that skillfully combine comfort and style. Nearly 100 years of experience and know-how in winter sports guarantee ski jackets and clothing with style and comfort. The design of Colmar's collections for men and women is discreet, modern and sophisticated. An Italian elegance that Colmar skillfully transfers to his functional sportswear. The Monza company has been developing its ski apparel for decades for and with professional athletes. Therefore, sportswear is technically mature and suitable for beginners as well as professionals. With fashionable ski jackets, you can also cut a beautiful figure on the slopes. After the Second World War, Colmar equipped the Italian Ski Federation with its best products. The cooperation lasted several decades, during which medals salute at the World Championships and the Olympic Winter Games for Colmarian athletes. Also because Colmar, in close consultation with the stars of the constantly fine-tuned its materials. For the 1952 Olympic Games, the Monza-based manufacturer developed the first truly aerodynamic nylon ski jacket in elastic tulle, which first took ski rider Zeno Colo to the top step of the podium, then became a bestseller among amateur skiers. This is how the slogan In caso caso neve, Colmar developed - in the case of snow, Colmar. A clear indication that Colmar is the ideal companion for the track and generally in the snow. But Colmar experienced the great boom in the late 80s, when a certain Alberto Tomba enchanted the world of skiing. La Bomba, as the Italian was called, shaped an entire era with his inimitable style and is still considered one of the best skiers of all time. At that time, the company also changed its logo. The classic red circle, which had surrounded the company's name for many years, was replaced by a stylized snowflake, which preceded the word Colmar - the logo was also intended to indicate the basic competence of the company.
